Black Tea

Black tea, in its various forms, is probably the most well known in Western cultures. The reason black tea is different from green tea, oolong or white tea is because the plucked leaves are fully oxidised.

Flowering Tea

Flower tea is carefully made with the combination of unique handicraft and modern technology. The beverage looks light green and yellow, clear and bright. It has a fresh mellow fragrance and a sweet aftertaste, with light green tea dregs. While brewed, the flowers are very charming and attractive, since they merge with the colour, smell, taste, and shape of tea.
